Overview

This codebook explains the variables used to analyze the health of the humanities in the Appalachian region. The data is from five sources:

1. Publicly accessible grant data (NEH data.gov, 2024)
2. The Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) (ARC, 2023)
3. The Small Area Income and Poverty Estimates (SAIPE) (US Census Bureau, 2023)
4. The Local Area Unemployment Statistics (LAUS) (US Bureau of Labor Statistics, 2024)
5. The Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS) (National Center for Education Statistics \(NCES\), 2023)

All of the data used in the analysis is based on grants and socioeconomic variables from 2018-2023. Before conducting my analysis, the data was cleaned to include these years and only states and counties designated to be in the Appalachian region. Please find the replication materials here.

Appendix B – Re-categorization of Project Disciplines

NEH publicly available data includes two columns: primary and secondary discipline. These columns are more fine-grained details on each project's field of study. For example, primary discipline may include U.S. History or Art History, whereas secondary discipline may include Middle Eastern Studies or Jewish History. To provide more overarching summary statistics, I manually coded an umbrella discipline for each project in the following categories: Area Studies, Arts, Language, Literature, History, Interdisciplinary, Social Science, and NA. I chose these categories based on reviewing the primary and secondary disciplines, as well as the eGMS reports from each award. It is important to note that changing lower-order categorization to higher-order categorization can result in a loss of information. However, this change allows for an analysis of general disciplines that receive certain amounts of funding. Additionally, the Unknown or NA discipline categories are typically attributed to state humanities councils, where the funding is allocated by the council itself and does not have a specific discipline. The specific categorization can be found below:

- Arts include any primary discipline with the keywords: Art, Arts, Dance, Film, Media, Music, Theater, Ethnomusicology, or Aesthetics
- History includes any primary discipline with the keywords: History, Civilization, Renaissance Studies, or Medieval Studies
- Literature includes any primary discipline with the keywords: Literature, Literary, Classics, English [Literature], or Composition and Rhetoric
- Language includes any primary discipline with the keywords: Language(s) or Linguistic(s)
- Humanities includes any primary discipline with the keywords: Anthropology, Archaeology, Religion, Logic, Digital Preservation, Journalism, Folklore and Folklife, Ethics, Philosophy, Law, or Phenomenology
- Social Sciences includes any primary discipline with the keywords: Social Sciences, Architecture, Communications, Gender, Geography, Politics, Political, International [Relations], Government, Conservation, Psychology, Sociology, or Economics
- Interdisciplinary includes any primary discipline with the keyword: Interdisciplinary
- Area Studies includes any primary disciplines remaining following the above categorizations with the keyword: Studies
